What a year it has been in 2022 for hash.peace! As we welcome 2023, we recollect our journey over the year.

In 2022, we collectively organised and participated in over 24 activities, an average of at least two per month! Our key initiatives of hash.peace Conversation series and our rebranded #hashJalanJalan have continued to push the needle towards community building and bonding.

Recently, we reflected on our formative years and discussed how we should take hash.peace and sustainable social harmony forward together as a society. Exciting plans ahead with the focus on building strong youth leadership that serves as an active voice for inter-belief & intercultural understanding.

In spite of the Sisyphean task ahead, the push need not be a lonely one. If there is one thing we have learnt from our year-end town hall, the strength of hash.peace lies in the collectiveness of our members, their passions, and dedications. Together, we are building our ability to advocate for peace and harmony in Singapore.

hash.peace is also thankful for the continued support of our members, partners and supporters, particularly the Ministry of Culture, Community and Youth, OnePeople.sg, other community partners from the interfaith sector, grassroots and corporate organisations. We look forward to strengthening & expanding our partnerships in this new year.

ABOUT HASH.PEACE

Founded in 2015, hash.peace is a youth-led advocacy group in Singapore with an interest to develop effective programs for sustainable social harmony.

Mission:

- Advocate racial and religious unity
- Build friendships that transcend differences
- Counter exclusivist and extremist mindsets in the community;
- Develop cultural intelligence and critical thinking programs
- Establish a support of network of peace leaders in Singapore and worldwide

Focus Areas:

- Microaggressions, racial and religious prejudice and discrimination in workplaces, schools and other common spaces
- Racial and religious exclusivist mindsets or behaviour that create tensions in the society
- Religiously motivated extremism and self-radicalisation that pose threat to Singapore's social cohesion
- Negative stereotyping of racial, religious and non-religious communities that are harmful to peace and unity

Founding of hash.peace

hash.peace began as a solo youth movement in December 2015. It was founded by Nazhath Faheema, a young Singaporean Tamil Muslim. She started by engaging peers and strangers from all walks of life over coffee or a meal to better understand different identities in multicultural societies.

Faheema believed that young people should lead bold and balanced conversations to sustain peaceful, positive relations in the community. She also felt that such ground discussions would safeguard the community from extremist ideologies that promote hate.

The idea behind hash.peace is "one conversation at a time" to change prejudice caused by stereotyped negative perceptions of racial and religious groups. With this purpose, hash.peace developed into a youth group dedicated to social harmony.

ABOUT HASH.PEACE

Philosophy:

hash.peace believes that the only obstacle to a united world is us (the different stakeholders and people). We see the importance of working with everyone who is also concerned about race-religion matters in Singapore. So, we engage and partner with various organisations and communities to create shared spaces for inter-ethnic and inter-belief.

the only obstacle that stands between us and a united world is us

It takes the whole of society to develop and maintain sustainable social harmony. Multiple stakeholders have different roles to play in managing diversities and differing views in the community. Government, business entities, civil society organisations, and community leaders have specific and shared responsibilities towards peace and unity.

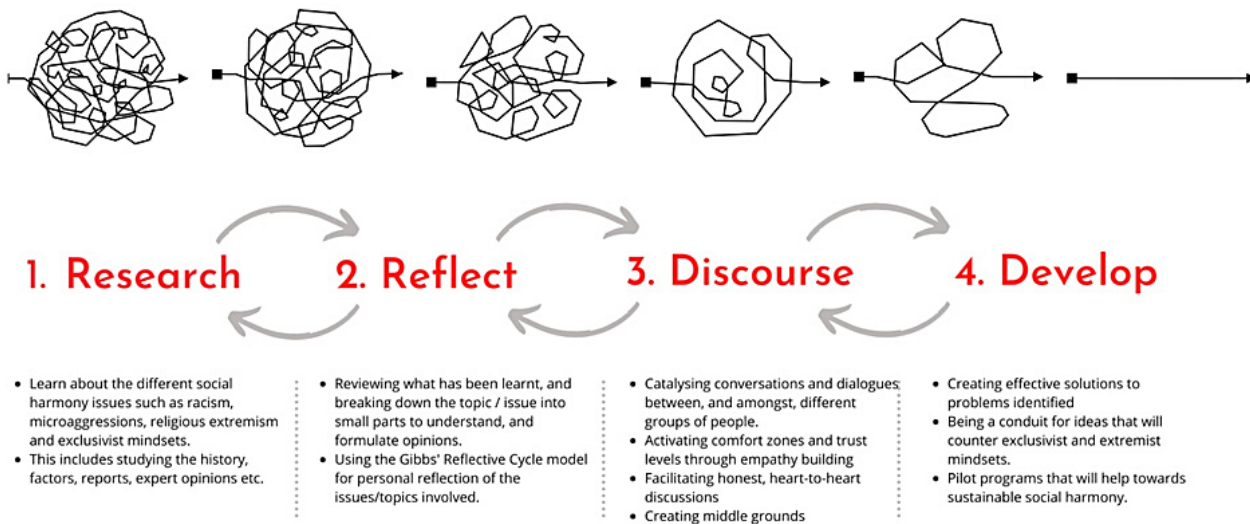

Without the cooperation and collaboration of everyone, our social cohesion will be vulnerable to conflicts and other forms of threats.

ABOUT HASH.PEACE

Modus Operandi

hash.peace promotes responsible advocacy of social harmony through the R2D2 model that encourages and motivates research, reflection, discourse, and development as a course of behaviour. This model applies both at an individual and group level.

hash.peace members are committed to the R2D2 as a modus operandi for our work and engagements.

CORE PROGRAMS

Living with Racism (LWR)

LWR is a series of dialogue sessions that seek to uncover the lived realities and experiences of individuals within multi-racial Singapore. It aims to create a safe space where such personal stories can be shared amongst peers and meaningfully acknowledged. This will in turn help to foster solidarity and cohesion amongst our different communities, where we can come together and be a source of comfort for one another.

Intra-Ethnic Conversations (IEC)

IEC is a program which aims to unpack the diversities within the different ethnic communities in Singapore. It aims to foster meaningful conversations for participants to share and learn more about the differences within larger racial groupings (i.e. CMIO). Participants will learn more about the lives of the Hokkiens, the Cantonese, the Sikhs, the Bugis, the Eurasians, and more. This is a 'Diversifying Diversity' effort by hash.peace.

Managing Diversity

Managing Diversity is a series of forums that seek to bring together different perspectives on managing diverse societies. Societies rely on various stakeholders that work in tandem to shape societal issues, from government to businesses, to community leaders, to non-governmental organisations.

Each stakeholder is both affected by societal issues, and able to effect change in society. There thus presents a need for multiple stakeholders to be able to effectively discuss their perspectives and network solutions together.

hash Jalan-Jalan

#hashJalanJalan is an initiative by hash.peace to foster intercultural and interbelief learning amongst Singaporeans and residents. Through this programme, hash.peace members and peers learn about the different racial and religious communities. They will visit places of workshops, cultural centers and community houses to engage with diverse groups of Singaporeans and residents. The aim is to create comfort touchpoints of gaining knowledge about the diverse identities in Singapore.

CORE PROGRAMS

hash.peace Conversation Series

hash.peace Conversation Series (HPCS) is a series of events that aim to look at the multi-faceted ways in which inter-racial and inter-religious issues affect us. In line with Racial Harmony Day in July, HPCS seeks to build the space for critical conversations about our Racial and Religious Harmony. Through the lens of three differently themed conversations, the inaugural HPCS will explore essential questions, like how racial issues affect our mental well-being, or how should companies enable and roll out racial/religious diversity initiatives in their workplaces. HPCS will also look at building and strengthening our cultural knowledge through learning more about the different communities in Singapore.

hashing Sessions

hashing Sessions are small group youth topical gatherings during which the members will have honest, frank and bold conversations about topics concerning race, religion and identities. The purpose of these sessions is to provide a confidence circle in which members can speak their mind and hear challenging perspectives. Before the session, members are encouraged to read and research on the topics.

LEADERSHIP

Gen 2.0 leadership : a next generation of advocacy for social harmony with new youth leadership

On 19 March 2022, hash.peace concluded its first Annual General Meeting. At this meeting, hash.peace Nazhath Faheema, passed on the presidency to Leonard Sim. She continues her work as Founder and Executive Committee Member. Leonard will now lead as the Society's second President. He will be supported by Didi Amzar, who takes over the role of General Secretary. Aathira Unnithan continues to support the team as Treasurer.

Ding Jie Tan and Sooty Heng Ee Wen continue as Executive Committee Members supporting hash.peace's efforts towards inter-belief and inter-ethnic dialogues.

Joining the Executive Committee as a new member is Shukul Raaj Kumar. He has over 11 years of working and volunteering experience with multiple communities and sectors, such as in Public Service and Social Service.

Interfaith 2022

Organised by Nanyang Technological University

hash.peace President Leonard Sim joined a panel of youth leaders from different religious communities in this event themed "Understanding how our religion affects the way we live our day-to-day life and our life choices".

Leonard reflected that it was heartening to know that there are so many youths interested in interfaith and building peace. The coming together of different religious groups to organise this interfaith initiative is inherently meaningful and speaks volume of the power of youths. He sees the need to continue to work towards bringing to the fore the strength and power of youth voices in this space.

"Building a 'safe space' (for conversations) is not some abstract concept. We do it on a daily basis. Take university orientation games for example - when we play games like 'Truth or Dare', we always say this: whatever we share here, stays here. It is as simple as that"

Fast date-ing

Organised by The Whitehatters, Interfaith Youth Circle, Centre of Interfaith Understanding & hash.peace

In this event, individuals from diverse backgrounds got to meet known or new faces in this "speed-dating" style interfaith conversation.

Participants shared about their personal experiences of fasting in their respective faiths, and also talked about how they connect with other religious traditions and rituals. Individuals who do not subscribe to religious beliefs shared how they relate to fasting.

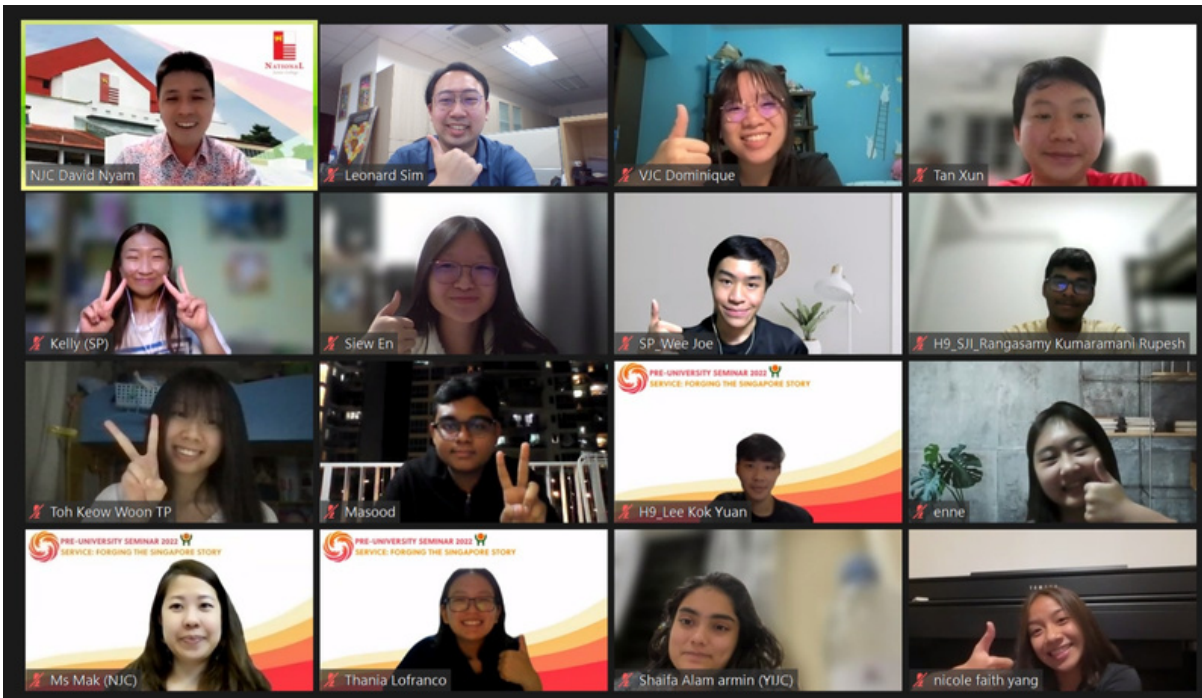

The conversation ended with a reflection led by diversity facilitator Farid Abdul Hamid, and a visit to the Ramadan Bazaar @ Geylang Serai.

Singapore Undergraduate Policy Conference 2022

Organised by NUS Political Science Society

hash.peace Founder, Nazhath Faheema, joined Mdm Rahayu Mahzam (Senior Parliamentary Secretary at Ministry of Health and Ministry of Law) and Dr Jamus Lim (Assoc. Professor of Economics at ESSEC Business School) at the Singapore Undergraduate Policy Conference 2022. This dialogue explored questions such as:

- What exactly is the “Singapore Core”?
- What are some pressing issues concerning “Frameworks & Infrastructure”, “Diversity & Inclusivity”, and “Sustainable & Smart City”? How can we tackle these issues?
- How do advocates and activists try to contribute to the formulation of more inclusive policies that better resonate with people on the ground?
- How much state intervention should there be? Can we be more liberal in the way our society functions?

We play different roles in the process of formulating policies that cater to the varied interests of Singaporeans and residents. Of course, this involves judgment calls and compromises. Public policies must evolve with society, and this requires streams of dialogues that represent diverse segments of community. Our work as government, civil society, academics, etc is to deepen the discourse that will consolidate the needs and wants of the society. We work harder on this everyday.

Youth Conversation on "Racial Harmony Day Beyond 2024"

Organised by hash.peace in partnership with Blossom World Society and supported by Harmony Diversity Gallery

Members and friends for Hash.peace and Blossom World had a reflective brainstorming conversation about commemorating Racial Harmony Day after 60 years of the communal riots in 1964.

The participants reflected about:

- Why do we commemorate Racial Harmony Day?
- Has the significance changed over the years?
- Can the current generation of young Singaporeans and residents relate to the communal riots in 1964? Should the communal riots still be a reference point? Are the issues about race and religion different now with the intersectionality of diverse identities?
- How can we make Racial Harmony Day more relevant to current and future generations, especially in the digital age?

They also brainstormed ideas to better commemorate and reflect on the significance of Racial Harmony Day in schools, tertiary institutions, neighbourhoods and workplaces.
